Disaster Nursing – Not if, But When Conference

All countries experience disasters of some kind, and they are usually unpredictable. Australia, regularly experiences natural events such as floods, fires, and cyclones. In an increasingly unstable world, attacks against the state are also a sad reality. In any such event, you – as a nurse – are likely to be called upon to step up and act both clinically and in the community. While your hospital or workplace is likely to have an emergency management plan, have you thought about your own response? Are you prepared to care in a catastrophe? What's YOUR disaster management plan? This conference includes:

- Stories from the front line...
- Assessment and triage during a disaster
- Forensic, perioperative, and public health perspectives
- Compared to prevent PTSD/ASD
- ç Tips for staying calm under pressure and much, much more...

Attend this conference to gain knowledge about disasters and their management to improve your professional preparedness.

Asthma, Allergies, and Anaphylaxis

Allergies, asthma, and anaphylaxis are not only prevalent concerns in our community, but they can also be life-threatening. No matter what area of nursing you are working in, your patients or clients will likely be affected by one of these conditions. Get the latest in evidence-based education and management. Attend this conference and discover:

- ç Allergies, diagnosis, management, and new advances
- Anaphylaxis, recognising the early signs and using autoinjectors
- Sathma, new research, diagnosis, and evidence-based treatment
- Patient education empowering people to improve their own outcomes

Increase your knowledge in relation to these significant and potentially life threatening conditions. Book now!

Linking Diet and Disease Conference

As a population, we need to ask: how exactly is diet linked to disease? The growing relationship between chronic illness and food means that, increasingly, nurses are required to know how and why a person's health needs to change. Modern thinking now suggests that striving to improve health is no longer as simple as "input versus output".

Attend this conference to learn how diet and disease are actually linked and find out how you can realistically enable your patients to improve their health.

Medicines: Improve Your Knowledge Seminar

11.5 Hrs

The administration of medicines is one of the riskiest areas of nursing practice – it requires a thorough understanding of pharmacodynamics and pharmacokinetics. In this context it is imperative that medicine interactions and unwanted side effects are readily identified. The combination of new and current medicines requires nurses to continually expand their knowledge and that of their patients. The onus for safe and quality practice remains with the professional handling of medicine. It is, therefore, imperative that nurses engage in evidence-based education. This vital update will look at:

- Preventing medicine errors
- c Important facts about how medicines act and are metabolised
- Safe administration and storage of medicines
- c Common medicine interactions and side effects
- c Where to look for credible medicine information
- c How to educate patients about their medicines

This seminar is for all nurses who have not had a formal update in medicines education in the past 18 months. Come and refresh your knowledge!
